History of Berwick

By Permission of Hertz & Raseley*

*Previously published in "Picturesque Berwick," by Messrs. Hertz and Raseley in 1901, and republished by special permission. In selecting material for the history of Berwick, Messrs. Hertz and Raseley reviewed all procurable histories and old letters and documents. From this data and the statements of old residents they have endeavored to make a true account of the birth and growth of our town.

In 1772, Evan Owen came from Philadelphia by way of the Susquehanna river in a Durham boat, and located on a clearing at the mouth of Fishing Creek. The settlement was made up principally of Quakers, among them being Benjamin Doan, whose family name is quite familiar to our older citizens. In 1780 Owen removed thirteen or fourteen miles farther up the river (where Berwick is now situated). Here he and others among whom were the Doans, seemed to content themselves with farming and between times keeping a sharp outlook for Indians which at that time were playing havoc up the valley. The earliest settlers were from Philadelphia. During the first year or two they pulled tree tops together and covered them with bark, living in these temporary abodes until they were able to build more permanent homes of logs, etc. The farming land being of good quality, quite a number soon settled here and this no doubt prompted Evan Owen to found a town, which he did in 1786. The location was a wise one; with natural drainage, because of its location at an altitude of 100 feet above the river; and surrounded as it is with picturesque scenery, no more suitable site could have been found along the whole shore of the meandering Susquehanna. The settlement, previously to the laying out of the town, was called by the farmers Owensville, but on the formal plotting into streets, etc., Evan Owen christened it Berwick, after the town of his nativity in Scotland, along the Tweed.

The next settlers were Robert and John Brown, who built log houses directly opposite each other on Market, very near the corner of Front. Samuel Jackson, a brother-in-law of Evan Owen, erected a house on Front street, on the present site of Lyman Fowler's residence, and was followed by James Evans, Henry Traugh and John Smith, who each built a house on North Front street. These settlers endured great hardships, as it was with the greatest difficulty they could obtain goods from Reading, and afterwards from Easton and Mauch Chunk, on horseback and foot. Evan Owen was the "Squire," and settled all disputes. Every bear killed was brought to him and divided equally among the settlers.

In 1800 John Jones opened the first store in the village on the site of T. H. Doan's hardware store, and subsequently erected the hotel now known as Hotel Morton. The first public house was opened by John Brown in 1804 on the corner of Second and Market streets, and was the general stopping-place of the stage coaches running between Wilkes-Barre and Northumberland. In 1805 a market house was erected in the centre of Market street, between Second and Third. It was supported on square timbers, sufficient space being underneath to hold market and drive horses and wagons. The building was devoted to school purposes, preaching, public assemblies and elections. The glass in the windows was of a greenish caste, thick in the centre, called "bull's eye glass," and gave but a very dim light.

William Brien's ferry being inadequate to the demands of the public, in 1812 a bridge company was formed, with the following officers: President, Abram Miller, Sr.; Treasurer, John Brown; Managers, Silas Engle, Thomas Bowman, Elisha Barton, Jr. Theodore Burr received the contract and completed the bridge in 1814. It was 1,260 feet long, with piers of heavy planked timber and cost $52,435. At that time William Brien kept a hotel above the bridge, and Richard Smith, Sr., lived in a log house below the bridge, where he carried on shoemaking and distilling. The residents all came to the river to do their washing and left their kettles hanging along the shore the whole year round.

On May 3, 1826, the steamboat "Susquehanna and Baltimore" came up the river as far as Berwick Falls, where she exploded, wounding several persons and killing five, two of whom, John Turk and Cebor Whitmar, are buried in the cemetery here. Some of the victims of the explosion were taken to the old brick building, corner Front and Mulberry streets, which was at that time a public tavern. The ball-room on the second floor was covered with bales of cotton saturated with oil and in this the sufferers were rolled. The stains of oil are on the floor to this day. The house now owned by Mrs. Anne Jackson was also opened to the injured and there given every attention by her people.

Ground was broken for the North Branch Canal on the 4th of July, 1828. It was a great day for Berwick, visitors flocking from all the country round to celebrate this new era in its commercial importance. During the building of the canal it did, indeed, assume the appearance of a small city, and when the first packet boat passed through here, in 1830, Berwick was one of the most important points along its route. There were fourteen drinking places in the town and pure whiskey sold at three cents a dram. Water at this time was conducted from Foundryville in logs, and supplied the town until 1848, when a water company was established.

In the spring of 1835 a slight rise in the river occurred, a cake of ice struck the fourth pier, the bridge was carried away and the ferry again came into demand. The Legislature appropriated $10,000 for a new bridge, and in 1837 it was completed by Eliphalet Edson and Charles Barrett, the contractors.

The Berwick Academy was erected in 1839 by Thomas Connelly on the site of the old market house. Rev. John H. Rittenhouse and a Miss Jones, of Troy, N. Y., were the first teachers. The languages, sciences, higher mathematics, music, drawing and painting were taught, and it was considered a very fine educational institute. In later years it was used by the public schools, and was razed to the ground in 1873.

The first telegraph line was constructed through Berwick in 1850, and with the opening of the Lackawanna & Bloomsburg Railroad in 1858, the town threw off the lethargy which had almost overcome it and began a new and brighter existence. In 1861 Jackson & Woodin began the manufacture of car wheels and cars, and ten years later the planing mill was erected, being followed in 1872 by the rolling mill and agricultural works.

The first children born in Berwick were John and Anne Brown, children of Robert Brown (Annie was the wife of Jesse Bowman, deceased, and the first person married in Berwick). The first church built was the Quaker, a log building, where C. C. Evans' residence now stands. The first lawyer was named Bancroft; first judge, John Cooper; doctors, Mooreland and Beisswick; postmaster, William Brien; schoolmaster, Isaac Holloway; preachers, Carson and Painter; coopers, John and Peter Solt; carpenter, John Brown; blacksmith, Aquila Starr; tailor, Benjamin Doan; chair maker and painter, Abel Dalby; mason, Jonathan Cooper, Sr.; dyer, Bush; potter, William Brien; tanner, Henry Traugh, Sr.; dentist, Vallershamp; tinner, Herman Inmann; gunsmiths, Sleppy & Co.; wheelwright, James Evans; silversmith, Marshall; milliner, Roxana Cortwright; butcher, Stackhouse; weaver, Polly Mullen; cabinet maker, Samuel Herin; saddle and harness maker, Col. John Snyder; lime burner, John Jones, the limestone then being obtained at the bottom of the river.

Among the names that will be remembered in connection with the history of Berwick are these: Dr. Samuel Headley, Honteter Seybert, Paul Thompson, Richard Smith, Mr. Davenport, Samuel Herrin, Josiah F. Beach, William Kitchen, Dr. A. B. Wilson, Dr. Jackson, Dr. Langdon, Thomas Coles, Bostian Seybert, A. Miller, Sr., Robert Smith, Charles Snyder, Joseph Stackhouse, Lawrence Ruch, Judge Mack, Andrew Shiner, Jonathan Cooper, Hugh Thompson, Thomas Richardson, William Herin, J. W. Dietrick, John McAnall, Hudson Owen, Michael Frantz, Frederick Nicely, Jesse Bowman, and Mrs. Eckert, nearly all of whom died at an extremely old age.

Dr. Samuel Headley was one of the largest land owners in Berwick. Where the rolling mill now stands was part of his farm. Mulberry street was once all of his orchard. He also owned the land from Judge Kurtz's residence up to the county line and back as far as Fifth street, as well as the old ferry landing on this side of the river. Christian Kunkle owned the ferry landing on the Neseopeck side.

INDUSTRIAL BERWICK

By ROBERT HARDER, Editor Berwick Enterprise

Berwick community comprises a population of 16,000 people. Berwick borough was laid out with limits one mile square. With the great territorial expansion that followed as a result of industrial progress, the populated sections extended over the west line, and West Berwick has been formed; over the north line and North Berwick was the result; over the east line into Salem or East Berwick. The population itemized is Berwick (census 1910) 5,357; West Berwick (census 1910) 5,512; North Berwick (part of Briar Creek township) 1,430; East Berwick (part of Salem township) 1,350; Nescopeck (virtually South Berwick) 1910 census, 1,573.

Berwick offers opportunities for every trade and is a rich field for investment, as its expansion has but partially met the industrial demands. The American Car and Foundry Company alone employs at full capacity 6,200 men, paying out $260,000 monthly (the average in best six months) in wages. In the past 10 years of transformation from old to Greater Berwick, fifty-three new streets have been laid out for a total length of 23 miles. Ten miles of streets have been graded; sixteen miles of sidewalks laid. The Berwick Water Company has laid 28 miles of new mains, reaching every section; the gas company has laid 11 miles of mains.

Greater Berwick has spent $105,000 in new school buildings. There are eight buildings, employing 68 teachers, and teaching 2,570 pupils. $60,000 has been spent in a modern sewerage system.

Berwick is reached by the D. L. & W. and S. B. & B. Railroads, with the Pennsylvania across the river. Reading connections 12 miles away and Lehigh Valley and D. & H. connections 23 miles away. The Business Men's Association invites new industries and offers free sites.

The Berwick Plant of the American Car and Foundry Company

Until 1898 this plant was known as the works of the Jackson & Woodin Manufacturing Company, and the history of the company is practically the history of Berwick, so closely have they been identified with its progress. By their liberality and public-spiritedness Berwick has become one of the most prosperous towns in Eastern Pennsylvania. In 1840 Mordecai W. Jackson in conjunction with Judge Mack erected on the corner of Third and Market streets a foundry, 25 by 46 feet, with a small shed in the rear, for the manufacture of agricultural implements. The firm of Jackson & Mack continued until 1843, when Mr. Jackson purchased Mack's interest and took into partnership Robert McCurdy, adding to the manufacture of agricultural implements that of hollow ware. About fifteen men were employed, four horses furnishing the power for running the blower and lathe, the only machinery then in use. Col. Clarence G. Jackson,* deceased (who afterwards became Vice-President of the Jackson & Woodin Manufacturing Company, and one of our most enterprising and influential citizens) then a boy between six and seven years old, assisted in driving the horse that turned the lathe. In 1846 the firm of Jackson & McCurdy was dissolved and M. W. Jackson continued the business alone, adding to the foundry a blacksmith shop and in conjunction with Louis Enke manufacturing heavy wagons, etc. In March, 1849, W. H. Woodin became a partner and the firm of Jackson & Woodin inaugurated their since prosperous career by erecting a small machine shop, adding to the business that of finishing stoves, tinware and spouting, and superceding horse-power with a small steam engine. The working force was increased to twenty-five men and the pipes for the Berwick Water Works were cast, between 500 and 1,000 pounds of iron being melted per day. Rapid strides followed, and in 1855 they were making castings for the L. & B. R. R. (now the D., L. & W.) of which M. W. Jackson was then a director and the superintendent. Mill gearing and stationary engines were manufactured, and a contract being taken in 1858 to furnish the bridge castings for the P. & E. R. R., an addition was built to the foundry, about a ton of iron melted per day and 50 men given employment. In the fall of 1861 an order was received for twenty four-wheel limestone cars. A shed about nine feet high, in which plows were formerly painted, was boarded up, and from this primitive car shop the first car was turned out. Two men were here employed and they built one car a week. The material was mortised, planed and framed by hand, holes being cut in the roof of the shop through which to let iron rods down into the cars. Small lots of 15 and 20 cars were built during the following summer at the rate of one and two cars a week, the wheels being pressed on the axles by hand with a wooden press. Some machinery in a shop at Taylorville being for sale in 1862, a cross-cut saw, a 15-foot one-sided bed planer, a tenoning machine and steam-power wheel press were purchased and stored in an old barn, not knowing how they were to be utilized. A contract to build one hundred cars was taken shortly after, and much anxiety was felt as to the their ability to complete it in time. Finally the cross-cut saw was brought from the barn, an inch and a-half line shaft put up, the saw attached, and the first machinery used in the construction of cars set in motion. It proved so successful that the planer and wheel press were put up, and five four-wheel cars were completed in one week. The tenoning machine followed and a car was built in one day, a feat which gave much satisfaction. Mr. Woodin remarking that "they didn't want to build more than one car a day." But it was not long until additions were made to the machine shop, foundry, car and blacksmith shop, a planer double the size of the old one purchased, wooden tracks laid around the works and two four-wheeled cars were finished in a day. By this time Jackson & Woodin had acquired a reputation as car manufacturers; heavier contracts were received and another car-shop was found to be necessary. A building 24 by 80 feet was erected alongside the railroad "under the hill," a 40-horse power engine was made and two box-cars per day were completed, the repairing of old cars being carried on at "the works on the hill," as they were then called. In 1863 another addition was made to the car-shop and the capacity increased to six four-wheel coal cars and two box-cars per day. Thus step by step was this establishment enlarged until in the winter of 1865-66 they were building five and six eight-wheel coal cars a day for the Pennsylvania R. R. and employing about 150 hands.

A fire broke out at 3 o'clock in the morning of March, 1866, and the works were totally destroyed. A consultation was held at the bank the following day—many of the employees being present anxiously awaiting the result—and with characteristic enterprise it was decided to immediately rebuild. New machinery was purchased, and with improved facilities and renewed energies they again commenced operations. Their business increased so rapidly that additions were constantly being made to their buildings, and they were soon encroaching on the farming lands of M. W. Jackson in the rear of the works, until in the year 1869 they were employing 550 men.

On March 1, 1872, the Jackson & Woodin Mfg. Co. was organized with C. R. Woodin, President; C. G. Jackson, Vice-President; Garrick Mallery, Treasurer; M. W. Jackson and W. H. Woodin, Executive Committee. The senior members of the firm then retired from active management of affairs to enjoy a well-earned life of ease, their positions being taken by their sons, to whose efficient management the success of the years following will attest. The business was then assuming such vast proportions that a railroad connecting the works with the D., L. & W. R. R. became a necessity. It was completed in the summer of 1872, running from the main line, with a grade of 150 feet to the mile, up a ninety-foot embankment to the rolling mill (then building), and thence to the works. Previous to the construction of this railroad the finished cars were drawn by horses through Market street to Canal, and down Canal street (with a grade of 400 feet) to the railroad; a heavy drag, with strong teeth and brake, being attached to the cars in the winter time to prevent them from sliding over the hill.

In 1872 a rolling mill was added to the works of the company, enabling them to make and shape the various forms of iron necessary in the construction of cars at their own shops and also to fill orders for other car building concerns and the general market. From year to year other additions were made, one of the most noteworthy of these being the pipe foundry where all kinds of gas and water pipe are made.

C. R. Woodin, retiring from the President's chair, C. H. Zehnder was made President and General Manager. A man of high standing in business circles, the company under his direction, gained added reputation for the values of their products.

Mr. Zehnder tendered his resignation in February, 1896, whereupon F. H. Eaton was made President.

In 1898 the Jackson & Woodin Mfg. Co. consolidated with many other car companies under the corporate name of The American Car & Foundry Company. Not long before this combination was effected, Mr. Eaton resigned from the Presidency of the former company and W. H. Woodin was elected President.

Upon the organization of The American Car & Foundry Company in 1898, Mr. Eaton was made First Vice-President and Mr. W. H. Woodin General Manager. On June 27, 1891, a newly-elected Board of Directors met at the offices of the company in New York, and elected Mr. Eaton President of the company and W. H. Woodin Assistant to the President. Wm. F. Lowry, who had been with the Jackson & Woodin Mfg. Company for many years, occupying positions of great responsibility, was hereupon made District Manager.

Fairbanks-Morse Water Systems

C The delivery of water under pressure without "water storage" is made possible in the most isolated country home at a comparatively small expense by the perfection of the auto-pneumatic pump. One or more pumps may be placed in a well or cistern or other source of supply and operated by compressed air, which is stored in an air tank by means of an air compressor. An automatic device makes the compressed air force the water out of two pump cylinders alternately, with a steady continuous flow. The pump operates only while water is drawn at the faucets. It starts automatically when the faucet is opened and stops when it is closed.

Full descriptive pamphlet completely explaining operation of this system and of the elevated tank and pneumatic tank systems will be gladly furnished upon request

¶ We are sole agents in this vicinity for Fairbanks-Morse Fresh Water Systems, Gasoline Engines, Farm Machinery, Etc. Let us give you prices.

"A Home for the Man Away from Home"

When looking for a room remember the

Y. M. C. A.

One of the problems of many young men away from home is to find a clean and comfortable boarding place, centrally located, with wholesome and agreeable surroundings. Recognizing this want and always eager to minister to needs of men, the Association has installed a dormitory department, which consists of 22 rooms, with accommodation for thirty men. The price ranges from $1.50 to $1.75 per week, according to the number of men in a room. No pains are spared in an effort to make the rooms attractive, homelike and comfortable.

Reasons for Rooming <sup>at</sup> the Young Men's Christian Association

1. The rooms are airy, well lighted and well kept.
2. The dormitory building is open both day and night.
3. One is associated with the best class of young men.
4. The building is centrally located.
5. The social environments are the very best.
6. The toilet and bathing facilities are unequalled.
7. If the service is not up to standard there is no embarrassment incidental to complaints.
